JACK JOHNSON HISSED.

Hostile Demonstration at Railway Station.

The change in the pugilist Jack Johnson's fortunes was illustrated at Chicago, on May 8, when a crowd at the Union Pacific Railroad station hissed him as he passed through en route to the court for the adjourned hearing of the charge against him under the "White Slavery" laws. The black fighter was dressed in a modest suit of blue, without the profusion of diamonds he wore when the case began, somebody evidently having given him a hint that such a display was inadvisable in the circumstances.

At the beginning of the hearing the proprietress of a resort at Pittsburg testified her dismissal of Belle Schreiber—a white slave—in the present case from her house. The Government had hoped to show that this action was due to Schreiber's association with Johnson; but the court sustained an objection of the defense to this line of examination. Belle Schreiber, a slight and rather pretty brunette, testified that she first met the accused when she was an inmate of one of the most notorious resorts in Chicago. The Government Attorney attempted to secure details, but the judge ruled that inasmuch as the witness's relations with Johnson were admitted he would refrain from polluting the ears of the jury with a recital of them. It will be remembered that subsequently Johnson was found guilty and sentenced to suffer imprisonment for a year and a day.

A WOMAN MAGISTRATE.

Miss Emily Duncan, chairman of the West Ham Board of Guardians, has been specially permitted by the Lord Chancellor to act as a Justice of the Peace in lunacy matters at the lunatic asylum. Miss Duncan, it is stated, is the first woman who has been allowed to officiate in this capacity.

An application for the purpose was made by the West Ham Guardians to the Lord Chancellor, who, in a former case of a similar kind at Bethnal Green some years ago, directed that the ex-chairman of the board should perform this function when the chairman happened to be a woman.

BEAUTY RECIPES. Advertising Methods.

LADIES' RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Select Committee of the House of Commons investigating the present state of the law in regard to the sale and advertisement of patent medicines recently had before them Mr. S. E. Ely, secretary, and manager of Messrs. Dearborn (Ltd.), described as proprietors of manufacturers, who have advertised largely in the form of "articles" under titles such as "Novel Beauty Recipes."

The Chairman (Sir E. Norman) said the attention of the Committee had been called to a series of advertisements in popular magazines of medical preparations and drugs, which were stated to have been recommended by a number of ladies, the recommendations being sometimes given with reference to repeated requests in an answer correspondence. He asked witness whether he was prepared to answer questions about these advertisements.

Witness said he was afraid he could not. The managing director of the advertisements, and he (witness) knew nothing about them. Mr. James G. Daniels, the sole director, was now in America.

Sir P. Magnus: A limited company with one director only?—Yes.

Witness, in reply to Mr. Newton, said the authorized capital of the company was £2,000.

Mr. J. W. Paken, one of the firm of Messrs. Dearborn, Sons, and Paken, solicitor, who was seated in the public part of the Committee-room, asked if he might say that this was a small private company formed by Mr. Daniels in January, 1912; and in his absence Mr. Ely was placed in rather an awkward position.

The chairman read out the following names which had appeared in the advertisements in question:—Mlle. Florence Gauthier, Mlle. Marcelle Brevier, Mlle. Anne M. de la Roche, Mlle. Dupré, Mlle. Maquette Fournier, and Mlle. Lucie Robert. He asked witness whether he had knowledge as to whether those persons existed or not.

Witness: None whatever.

The room having been cleared for a few minutes, the Committee afterwards called Mr. Paken, who said he prepared the memorandum and articles of association on the formation of the company. As to the affairs of the company from a business point of view, he knew absolutely nothing. The memorandum was signed Mr. J. G. Daniels and Mr. Sidney Fowler. When the company was formed 602 21 shares were issued—501 to Mr. Daniels and one to Mr. Fowler, who was Mr. Daniels's first secretary. The office of the company was in Theobald's-road, but he had never been in them.

In answer to Mr. C. Bathurst, witness said he had no knowledge of the advertisement in question, but some little time ago Mr. Daniels consulted him, and he thought, without any breach of professional confidence, he might say that since then the advertisements had not appeared in the form of answers to correspondents.

PRIVATE LETTERS.

Mr. Ely was again examined, and in reply to the chairman said their goods were manufactured for them by qualified chemists according to formulae. He knew nothing about the ingredients.

Again pressed as to whether he had any knowledge of the existence or non-existence of the various ladies mentioned in the advertisements, witness maintained that he had no knowledge.

Asked if he could produce any letters from the ladies whose names had been mentioned, witness said, "Of course I cannot do so. They are private."

The Chairman: I don't think you realize the powers of this Committee. We do not wish to take strong steps, but we could call upon you at once to produce the letters.

Witness: You can decide what you want and call for it, and then we will decide whether you can have it. (Laughter.)

The Chairman: I want to warn you. I can quite understand that you wish to defend yourself as far as possible in the interest of your firm, but you would be very unwise if you were to do so to the detriment of this Committee. We desire to know whether these various ladies have a real existence, or are only imaginary persons for advertising purposes.

Witness said the letters in question were six months old, and related to advertisements which had since stopped. There had been letters at the office, but where they came from he did not know, and they had not passed through his hands. They were sent to the office, and he was in his charge, unless he regarded them as private letters of Mr. Daniels.

Sir P. Magnus: Letters of that kind cannot be private.

The Chairman: You can point to no fact which would lead you to think these ladies had a real existence?

Witness said that at the time the letters were running he had an idea that Mr. Daniels was an actual person.

On what did you found the idea?

Various things one notices in the course of business.

Can you give us one instance?—I cannot give you any specific instance.

A SUBJECTIVE EXISTENCE.

Mr. Lawson: She had a subjective, and not an objective, existence? (Laughter.)

—You can put it that way if you like.

The Chairman: To be perfectly frank, do you believe these ladies were used for advertising purposes? I don't think I should express a personal opinion.

The Chairman: I sympathize with you in being called upon to answer these questions without the opportunity of consulting your employer. I hope he will think you have done your best in his interest. (Laughter.)

Answering further questions, Mr. Ely said a dividend had been paid, but "you must not ask me how much." (Laughter.)

Their goods were made by Messrs. Paken, Davis, and Co.

Mr. Lawson asked whether the "reader" form of advertisement was looked upon as a literary contribution to the magazine.

Witness: Oh, dear, no. It is not intended to be regarded as literary. The scale for such advertisements was higher than for ordinary advertisements.

In reply to Mr. C. Bathurst, he said the average charge was £15 per page. They advertised in ten or eleven magazines a month, and had been doing so ever since they started. It paid them, or they would not continue it.

Mr. Bathurst: How often do your directors meet? There is one director, and he meets himself. (Laughter.)

This concluded the examination of the witness, and the Committee adjourned.

FATHER VAUGHAN IN AMERICA.

ANNOUNCING ENCOUNTERS.

In a lecture at Queen's Hall last week on "What I saw and said in the United States," Father Bernard Vaughan informed a large audience that his recent trip extended over a distance of 30,000 miles. Incidentally he had been in a train wreck, and was almost shipwrecked.

Upon the latter occasion the ladies rushed to him and asked if he thought they would be saved. "That," he replied, "depends upon yourselves, but I have the best authority for saying that the way is as short to Heaven by water as by land." A New York reporter, who proceeded, was a witness of a wonderful power-house, where everything was enterprising, enterprising, and adventurous. "If you keep like that," commented an American upon his leisurely British methods, "we will have to meet you with a hearse."

Mr. Vaughan much longer, he returned, "you will have to meet me with a perambulator."

Father Vaughan said that he had occasion to preach at the Catholic Cathedral in New York. When he arrived the place was already full, and a large crowd had assembled. "Fretting," he was told, "towards the bar," he was informed that there was no standing room except in the pulpit. "Well, I'll take the pulpit," replied Father Vaughan. At that moment he was recognized by some of the officials, and was escorted to the pulpit. The Bishop pointed to the cathedral and place, and asked him how he "liked it." "I said it was all right," said the Bishop, "the cathedral and the place were right here on the way. I did not like the location, so I wheeled the whole thing back." This was one of the many instances of house-moving, which Father Vaughan became eloquent of, and on one occasion he sat at sea while the house itself was being wheeled to the next street.

Philadelphia had the reputation of being so slow that one of the citizens was brought up to court upon the charge of "growing scarlet runners." At Baltimore, the centre of a great canning industry, their action of life was: "We can, what we can, and what we can't we can't." At St. Louis an American said to him: "Look at our Hudson and Mississippi Rivers! Why, compared with our rivers, you Me say and Severn and Thames are sleepy, sickly streams." "I think your two rivers are sickly as ours," retorted Father Vaughan. "I presume it is confined to its bed."

A "SEVEN SISTERS" BET.

A humorist who saw "The Seven Sisters" at the Savoy Theatre (says the "Daily Sketch"), made a bet of a fiver that he would find a family of seven sisters in the Seven Sisters-road and take them to see the play.

ously told, a policy so delightful to hundreds of thousands of women who claim the franchise that they are subscribing hard cash in great sums to promote the accomplishment of such deeds on a still more wholesale scale. That this is true cannot be for a moment believed. The suffragettes are a stage army, and they deal, to a large extent, in stage money. That they once had some very wealthy people among their subscribers is an undoubted fact, but the latter developments of the campaign have led to the secession of one after another of the richer supporters. That is only natural. Men and women of substance, whatever their views, have to recognize that a system based on house-burning must by its nature prove detrimental to the interests of the property-owning class in the long run. Grievances there are in plenty in an imperfect world, and if every class with a grievance adopted the tactics of the suffragettes there would be a definite farewell to all security of property. It is not surprising, therefore, that one by one the comparatively mild- and rich-suffragettes have quietly severed their connection with the organization, which is now in the hands of a very violent knot of people of a distinctly lower social status. That they have money in some amount can be well believed. But it is no very considerable sum—probably it does not exceed £20,000—and it is rapidly being exhausted in wages of stipendiary rowdiness and the expenses of a large establishment. Nor is the future more cheerful. The militants are faced with a chill prospect of waning enthusiasm and a decreasing flow of cash. They are required to making statements, as to the condition of their funds, which will not bear examination. It was, for example, stated that the recent Albert Hall meeting yielded £15,000; but the actual cash, it is believed, amounts to a little over £800. The glamour of the movement in short, is spent. A year or two ago it was considered rather "smart" to be "militant." Women of a certain distinction in social and literary circles thirsted for the fierce light which beats on Bow-street, and foolish girls of the suburban class looked forward to meeting, in the secret conclaves of the conspirators, people whose names were known in a greater world. But now militancy has rather gone out of fashion. It has become a little middle-class, trumpery, almost provincial. A pretty girl selling a suffragette paper, at one time a not uncommon street spectacle, is now a rarity. The reign of uncontrolled vulgarity has, in short, driven out most of the enthusiasts who were not hopelessly vulgar, and the residue are, generally speaking, of a class perfectly fitted to do the rough criminal work, but valuable neither as leaders nor financial supporters.

A good test of the strength of any movement is the circulation of the newspaper which specially represents its interests and aspirations. It has been stated, on what seems good authority, that the actual sale of "The Suffragette" has declined from 17,000 weekly to 7,500. Thousands of copies were circulated to M.P.s and others, says the writer of an article in the "Standard," but the number of people willing to pay a penny for the journal did not exceed the population of an ordinary market town. Now there are about eight million adult women in the United Kingdom who would be entitled to a vote under adult suffrage. If one in a hundred of this multitude were, as the militants claim, warmly enthusiastic for letter-spoiling, window-breaking, and arson, the circulation of the one paper which devoted itself to such projects would be some ten times greater than it actually is. "The Suffragette" has no fierce competition to meet in its own line; it is quite self-generated. At the utmost zeal of its supporters fails to get more readers there must be some very substantial reason behind the fact. The reason is simply this: that the militants are an altogether insignificant though noisy fraction of the general body of suffragists. They are full of bounce and bluster, and they have a faculty for keeping themselves in the public eye. But they have no real influence, and even the methods of impudence that they have brought to a fine art are now falling from

use. Through the militant suffragists continue to inflict annoyance and loss on the public, there is every reason to believe that the vigorous policy that is now being taken against them by the authorities has inflicted a death-blow on the criminal organization which is responsible for the campaign of outrage. The game is nearly up. The conspiracy cannot long survive vigorous attacks supported by the full force of the law. The militants see this themselves, and they are now making desperate efforts to frighten the Government back into its old inept ways. A great bluff is being organised. The idea is to give an impression of enormous moral force behind the movement. The militants hope, by cunning suggestions that the whole sex is supporting them in their "war on society," to frighten Ministers from pursuing that simple but effective plan of action which, if adopted earlier, might long ago have stopped all mischief. The cry of "freedom of the Press," which was raised to enlist the sympathy of Labour, seems to have died away; it was too silly for any considerable exploitation. Nor have the leaderless rebels been able to shock humanity by their violence. They still administer pin-pricks to the public, and their antics have led to annoying limitations to the enjoyment of sight-seers in town and country. But the freaks of men and senseless injury to property which still occur reveal no master hand; they are simply the work of spiteful women with no special genius even for destruction. Now the cue is to stun the public with announcements of vast sums being subscribed for the purposes of militancy. We are told that the raid on the Women's Social and Political Union has raised the enthusiasm of the militants to fever heat, that money is pouring into their secret coffers, and that they have a "war reserve" of £125,000 invested in such a way that it cannot be touched by the hand of authority. The burning of houses, the scattering of bombs, and the senseless destruction of letters represent, we are seri-

THE CIRCUS.

BENEFIT TO COL. BOB LOVE.

A complimentary benefit was given at the circus at Canoway Bay last night to "Colonel" Bob Love, the veteran showman. There was only a fair attendance in spite of the fact that a special programme had been arranged. In addition to the circus company, Miss Nora Moore, from the Victoria Theatre, offered considerable pleasure by singing the Waltz song from "The Pink Lady," and also "On Mobile Bay" as an encore. Miss Moore has a fine voice, and she did not difficulty in "filling" the spacious circus hall, her enunciation being distinct and clear. A good exhibition of weight-lifting was given by Private Gilbert Moyle. Some amusing clowning business was gone through by Mariani, Nini, and Roma, whose tomfoolery caused many rounds of hearty laughter. The specialty turns included a six-horse entry by three ladies and three gentlemen, a trick pony introduced by Miss Eardopa, a "Wild West" performance by Young Buckshot and Company, and a company of clowns. Towards the conclusion of the entertainment Colonel Bob Love entered the arena and retired thanks to those who had given their patronage to his benefit, and in response to calls from many sides, the Colonel sang a song with a rollicking lil.

Billiards.

The semi-final of the Volunteer Challenge Cup between 83rd Coy., R.G.A., and Staff and Departmentals was resumed at the Soldiers' Club last night, the Staff team holding a lead of 66 points.

The first game was between Sergt. Bennett, 83rd Coy., R.G.A., and Staff Sergt. Coy., Staff and Departmentals. Coy was quickly to business, scoring 30 to Bennett's 14, and 100 to 61. Bennett was unfortunate, the balls running unkindly for him, but he reached his hundred only 18 in arrears. Coy, however, maintained a lead to the end when he was the winner by 26 points. Breaks, Coy, 14, 11, 10; Bennett, 17, 13, 10. Scores: Staff Sergt. Coy., 200; Sergt. Bennett, 174.

Two excellent exponents of the game were the next pair; Sergt. Erwood, 83rd Coy., P. G. A., and Staff Sergt. Foster, Staff and Departmentals. For some time the game was even, Foster leading 50-41, but Erwood led at 66 for the first time, and at 100 was 12 in front of his opponent.

The scores were level at 115, a six break of 20 by Erwood taking him to the front, and with his score at 181 he looked like running to this point but, after scoring 18 he failed at an easy red ball. Foster made a few more points before Erwood made the two necessary for him to win the game by 27 points; Breaks, Erwood, 20, 1, 18, 12; Foster, 16, 18, 12. Scores: Sergt. Erwood, 200; Staff Sergt. Foster, 173.

The last game was entered upon with the Staff and Departmentals leading by 93 points, so that the Rev. Foster, P. G. A., Staff and Departmentals required 128 to win the match for his side; his opponent, Bomb. Colmer, 83rd Coy., R.G.A., therefore having a stiff proposition. Play up to the first hundred was even, Colmer leading 10-39 and 100-94. This did not look much like winning but, after both being in the 100-150 street, a transformation occurred, Colmer scoring rapidly and Rev. Foster falling away completely. Colmer scored his last 100 while his opponent made 25, and scored a splendid win by 50 points. Breaks, Bomb. Colmer, 22, 13, 11, 10. Rev. Foster, Nil; Scores: Bomb. Colmer, 200; Rev. Foster, 120.

Each team won four of the eight games played, the 83rd Coy., R.G.A. winning the match by the narrow margin of 15 points, the final score being—83rd Coy., R.G.A., 1405.
Staff and Departmentals 1488.

The 83rd Coy., R.G.A., now engage the Royal Engineers (A) in the final.

BARRISTER REPRIMANDED.

Incident in the Supreme Court.

At a sitting of the Full Court of Appeal this morning held for the purpose of delivering a reserved judgment upon a motion made on behalf of Mr. G. K. Hall Brutton, gentleman and solicitor of the Supreme Court, there was a passage of words between the Chief Justice, Sir William Ross Davies, K.C., and Mr. W. W. Slade, K.C., who represented the appellant in the action. Mr. Slade was reprimanded for impugning a statement his Lordship had made, the Judge informing him that he had not only impugned his word over and over again, but had done so most offensively.

The motion, it will be remembered, took the form of an appeal against an order made by the Court relating to the taxation of certain bills of costs and fees delivered by appellant to the respondent, Leung Shin Kong, whom appellant represented in a big law suit brought against him by the Imperial Bank of China.

Mr. Slade, instructed by Mr. J. S. Harston, of Messrs. Deacon, Looker, Deacon and Harston, appeared for the appellant; and Mr. C. G. Alabaster, instructed by Mr. Roder Harris, of Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist, for the respondents.

Mr. Justice Kamb, Puisse Judge, read the written judgment by Sir Haviland de Saussure, Chief Justice of H.B.M. Supreme Court in China, who presided at the sitting of the Full Court of Appeal. In the course of it his Lordship said there was no reason why a solicitor should not send in a bill conditionally so as to prevent a right in the client to have that bill taxed and if Mr. Brutton had clearly indicated that this was an offer by way of settlement no doubt he could have claim to deliver a further bill. But as he had been pointed out in all the cases quoted the provisions as to the right to tax delivered bills were for the protection of the client in view of the advantage given by the solicitor by his skilled knowledge. If the solicitor was going to claim such a right as was claimed here he must be very careful to preserve that right. This Mr. Brutton had not done. He had accordingly no difficulty in coming to the conclusion that the solicitor's bill was delivered and delivered unconditionally. Once a bill was so delivered it was, he thought, quite clear, on the cases that had been cited, that the client was entitled to have the bill taxed, unless it was out of time, and then if there were special circumstances, the judge could order taxation. Such an order had been made, and as he thought rightly made, the appeal ought to be dismissed.

Their Lordships the Chief Justice and Puisse Judge both delivered judgments concurring in the preceding judge's opinion and an order was made accordingly against the appellant, with costs.

Mr. Slade asked their Lordships to make an explicit order that the costs already taxed should not be taxed again. In the course of a rather lengthy submission he contended that he had been successful on this appeal, and then proceeded to refer to something which had taken place in Chambers.

The Chief Justice said it was not Mr. Slade's duty to say that, and he was not present in Chambers; he was, and heard the whole thing in Chambers.

Mr. Slade: Then, my Lord, may I suggest that your Lordship's memory is at fault?

The Chief Justice: We have given our judgment, and I am not inclined to allow you to supersede the judgment we have given.

Mr. Slade: May I read your Lordship's notes?

Mr. Slade was proceeding to do this when, the Chief Justice said: I will not allow you to over and over again impugn what I have said.

Mr. Slade: I did not wish to impugn what your Lordship said, but—

The Chief Justice: You have done so, and done it over and over again most offensively. You cannot always be right. None of us can always be right.

Mr. Slade: May I be permitted to suggest without any offence that perhaps in this case your Lordship's memory is playing you false, May I?

The Chief Justice: I will hear you on Monday. We have given our judgment. If there is any question as to the form the order should take I will hear you in Chambers.

MORE "MARCONI SHARE" LITIGATION.

A writ has been issued by a number of shareholders in the English Marconi Company against Mr. Geoffrey Isaac, the Marconi director, and Haybourn and Croft, stockbrokers, to recover the difference between the highest market price and the par value of 500,000 American Marconi shares. About £1,000,000 is involved.

RUSSIA IN MONGOLIA.

Since the conclusion of the Convention between Russia and Mongolia at Urga on November 3, 1912 by which Russia recognized the autonomy of Mongolia, considerable interest has been shown in the development of the situation. China at that time was unable to voice an effective protest although the Chinese Government never acquiesced in the arrangement made by Russia and Mongolia. Recently, however, negotiations have been carried on between China and Russia with the view of arriving at some sort of modus vivendi in regard to Mongolia. China was of course anxious to "save face" to the greatest possible extent, and there seems to be reason to suppose that Russia was willing, without really abandoning her privileged position in Mongolia, to permit China to retain a shadow of her former suzerainty over Mongolia.

The Chinese Parliament, however, has not bailed this agreement with undue enthusiasm and has expressed a strong desire to secure the modification of some of the articles. Regarded from a disinterested, but sympathetic, view point, China seems to have been conceived by Russia quite as much as she could reasonably expect.

A series of articles in the May Number of the "Far Eastern Review" gives a general deal of interesting information in regard to the political and economic situation in Mongolia, and the diplomatic instruments relating to the new-born "Mongolian Empire" are also published. These articles can be read with advantage by those who desire to obtain an accurate understanding of the present position in regard to China's North-east "dependency."

SCOTTISH SPORT.
(From Our Own Correspondent.)
Edinburgh, May 27.
Ayr gave their usual consistent display in the Union match against Perthshire, and strengthened their position on the field by winning somewhat easily. At Kilmarnock, the home team were outplayed in all departments by Pollok, who recorded their first success in the competition, just getting home, however, two minutes from time.

The first century recorded in the Edinburgh district went to G. A. Turton, of Loretto, and Loretto, it may be said, looks like taking a prominent part in the Scotch Championship.

MINISTERS AND "MARCONI'S"

THE DEBATE RESUMED.

LONDON, June 20.
As briefly reported in yesterday's "China Mail," the debate on the Marconi affair was resumed in the House of Commons, which was crowded with members when Mr. Lytton began the proceedings. He declared that in view of the attitude of the Ministers it was imperative to carry Mr. Cave's motion to a division. (Cheers and counter-cheers.) Until yesterday there had been no acknowledgment of the error, and the apology of Sir Rufus Isaacs was a qualified one.

PREMIER'S SPEECH.

"CAMPAIGN OF CALUMNY."
Mr. Asquith, who was received with cheers, said he had hoped that after the speeches of the Ministers there might have been some general agreement. That hope, however, had been shattered. He agreed that the Ministers would have been better advised to have told the whole story in October. It would have saved an enormous amount of time and trouble. He emphasised that the two Ministers had broken no rule or obligation, but they had failed to observe the rule of prudence. He denounced the campaign of calumny and disingenuous appeals to racial and religious animosity.

MR BALFOUR'S SPEECH.

Mr. Balfour said that a charge of personal corruption would be absurd, but neither the Premier nor the House was treated with anything like frankness by Mr. Lloyd George and Sir Rufus Isaacs in October, and no defence had been advanced on that point. Replying to the appeal by Mr. Asquith for a unanimous conclusion, he said the Opposition agreed in substance with the amendment of Mr. Buckmaster. Did the Liberals agree with the substance of the Opposition's motion? He suggested combining the two. What he wished the House to do was to leave a record indicating regret at what had taken place. Unless they did so it would be a disaster to the public life of the country. He appealed to the Premier to find some form of words more consistent with the credit of the House and likely to maintain the purity of public service.

SIR EDWARD GREY.

Sir Edward Grey said that Mr. Bonar Law put a very harsh construction on the transaction. His phrase "A want of frankness" was capable of being construed as imputing a dishonourable motive, and if so construed would entail the resignation of two Ministers and close their political careers. The House ought to pass no motion that could be regarded in the nature of a vote of censure.

A "LIBERAL" RESOLUTION.

Mr. Ryland Adkins (Liberal), moved the following resolution:—
"That this House, after hearing the statements of Sir Rufus Isaacs and Mr. Lloyd George referring to the purchases of shares in the American Marconi Company, accepts their expressions of regret that such purchases were made and were not mentioned in the debate in October, but acquits them of acting otherwise than in good faith, and reproaches the charges of corruption brought against the Ministers, which have been proved to be wholly false."

AMENDMENT WITHDRAWN.

Mr. Buckmaster withdrew his amendment.

THE OPPOSITION'S TACTICS.

After further discussion, Mr. Bonar Law declined to accept Mr. Ryland Adkins' motion, but was willing to accept the following:—
"That this House, having heard the statements of Mr. Lloyd George and Sir Rufus Isaacs, acquits them of acting otherwise than in good faith, and reproaches the charges of corruption brought against Ministers, which have been proved to be wholly false, but regrets their transactions in American Marconi shares and the want of frankness in their communications to the House."

"UNIONIST" MOTION DEFEATED.

On the vote being taken, Mr. Cave's motion was defeated, and the House, by 346 votes to 268, adopted the motion of Mr. Adkins.

THE VOTING.

The Liberal members, Messrs. Martin, Mason, and Munro-Ferguson, voted for the minority, and 71 Nationalists and most of the Labour members voted for the majority, the remainder of the Labour members abstaining.

PRESS COMMENT.

Comments on the Marconi debate are most varied.

The Times says that the ending of the debate by a Party division might and ought to have been avoided, but the House has emerged from a critical ordeal with more credit than at one time seemed probable, as the result of the speeches by Mr. Asquith and Mr. Balfour.

The Daily Mail deprecates that the House of Commons could not rise above partisanship after the remarkable appeals of Mr. Asquith and Mr. Balfour. The debate should have ended after Mr. Lloyd George and Sir Rufus Isaacs had admitted their errors.

The Daily Telegraph says: "Parliament is low enough already. It stands further discredited to-day by adopting a resolution of condemnation."

The Morning Post says: "It was a disastrous result to a disastrous debate. The House of Commons has affirmed the principle that Ministers may, if undiscovered, accept financial favours from a would-be contractor."

The Daily Graphic says: "Mr. Bonar Law's rejection of Mr. Adkins' compromise was a mistake from the standpoint of the country and the Unionist Party."

The Standard rejoices that the vexatious business is ended. No great harm, it says, has been done at present, and future Cabinet Ministers have received a salutary warning.

The Daily Chronicle says: "The shabbiness and the unworthiness of the whole debate was due to the weakness of the Unionist leadership and its subservience to the extremists of the rank and file."

The Daily News and Leader says: "The Opposition, which applauded Mr. Balfour and then refused to compromise, was guilty of a cynical and impudent breach of faith. The public now recognise the object of the whole campaign, namely, a plot to destroy Ministers in order to destroy the policy."

AMERICAN TARIFF LAWS.

OBJECTIONABLE CLAUSE STRUCK OUT.

WASHINGTON, June 20.
The Senate Committee has struck out the Tariff Bill clause giving the Customs' agents authority to examine the books of foreign manufacturers. This clause has led to numerous protests by Europeans.

THE RACECOURSE SENSATION.

A MADMAN'S ACT.

LONDON, June 19.
The incident reported in yesterday's "China Mail" naturally caused a tremendous sensation.

Whalley, who was riding Tracery, was unhurt. Interviewed by a Pressman, he said a man shouted something like "Halt, or I will fire." Then came a smash, and all went flying.

The man sustained a fracture of the skull, and was operated upon.

The King sent to Whalley and inquired if he were hurt.

Tracery's assailant was a middle-aged man named Hewell, a Cambridge graduate and the son of a wealthy landowner. In a rambling diary, the latest entry in which was made on the Racecourse, it is shown that he intended to die in the fight against Society convention. In his possession were found £200.

BULGARIA'S REPLY.

SOVIA, June 20.

The text of the Bulgarian reply is published. It protests most vigorously against the revision of the Treaty of Alliance.

It appears that Serbia will refer the division of the disputed zone to the arbitration of the Tsar.

According to a telegram from Budapest, Count Tisza, in the Chamber of Deputies, said that Austria was anxious to see the real independence of the Balkan States. He assured them that they could not allow any Power to intervene with a view to influencing the free decision of the Allies in solving the present difficulties.

FLIGHT CIRCULAR.

Messrs. Lamke and Bogg, ship and freight brokers, in their flight circular dated June 21st, state:—

Our last circular was dated 7th instant, and during the period since elapsed, a somewhat quiet tone has pervaded the freight market, the volume of business transacted being smaller and rates of freight in some directions are showing a slight retrograde movement. That rates should further decline is, however, unlikely, it being generally expected that the present lull, which is principally attributable to the falling off in the demand from Saigon to this, will be of but short duration, and that the market may revive at any moment.

Saigon to Hongkong—Only a few regular liners are reported sailing, rates ranging from 21/- cents down to 19/- cents per piece. At the same time, except the boats on the regular run, no tonnage is available at such figures, and so far other vessels appear to have had little difficulty in finding more remunerative outlets in other directions. Rice exports during this season amount to total 465,122 tons compared with 399,256 tons during the same period of last year. Quotations for rice stand for June/July No. 2, white round, at 44.50 against 45.50, same period, last year.

From Saigon to Philippines business has been done at 20/- cents to Manila, option 2 ports P.I. at 35 cents per piece, but there appears to be no demand for additional tonnage at the moment.
